

Elizabeth D'Amico

Artist's Info

Often my art addresses nature and climate change. I am a mixed media artist with a focus on printmaking, painting, collage, box assemblages and found object sculptures. Part of the reason for this focus is that I feel totally free and environmentally responsible about using found object materials. Creating any mixed media work is always an honest and all consuming voyage of discovery for me. I love the surprising twists and turns along the way as I discover where I am going with each work. This is especially true when I am creating a mixed media work. I find that I learn and experience so much more by alternating and often combining the media with which I choose to work. I frequently find that an experience with one medium, whether it is a success or not, leads to fresh insights that can be applied in another medium.